Recommendations

- In the Current curriculum, the name of the competencies needs to be developed by the student nurses are already mentioned in the log book and various evaluatory and non evaluatory assignments. It is time for teachers to be the facilitator and role model for the student. The teacher needs to give basics and for remaining things should be learned by student by himself under mentorship and facilitator ship of teacher.
- There should be less of theory hours for classroom teaching and more hours for problem based learning and its output in the form of concept mapping, presentations, debate etc.
- It is recommended that let educational institute should have modern technology and equipment for virtual learning.
- Teachers should be trained in newer methods of teaching learning and evaluation of performance of the students through workshops, etc. they should be given a time to work on instructions for the students for effective learning.
- Proficiency and Competency assessment – There is need for newer methods of competency and proficiency assessment not only during practical examination but even on day today practice such as- OSPE/OSCE, DOPS, etc.
- It is recommended to provide autonomy for nurse practitioner which has very less power at present regarding decision making and action taking.
- It is recommended to generate curiosity and facilitate students to work on ideas, challenge existing nursing care, protocol, etc. Let nurses should feel that there is a scope for innovation and overcoming the challenges.
- There should be facility for online education programme for nurses made in a way to assess the clinical reasoning and critical thinking.

INTRODUCTION

The healthcare industry in India is advancing and reshaping to greater heights, both in growth & dimensions for optimizing the quality of care. Nurses play a key role in taking care of the medical needs of patients.

The students of today's era are born in a totally digital world. Updated and innovative teaching methods are becoming mandatory with efforts to engage Millennial and Generation Z nursing students. With enormous advances in medicine and technology, it is crucial to reform the existing under graduate and postgraduate nursing curriculum to make it relevant to the requirements of current health care system.

Health care sector demands highly competent nurses who are authorized to function independently and collaboratively for an extended clinical role. By recognizing the need of specialist nurses in the Country, the Government of India has set-forth path breaking competency based Nurse Practitioner Programmes.

The roles and responsibilities of nurses are transforming with developments in medical sciences, policy regulations, health care priorities and emerging advances in nursing and scientific research. There are numerous careers and opportunities available in the nursing and health care field one of which is nursing entrepreneurship. In India the concept of entrepreneurship is yet to receive its popularity, while in western countries nurse entrepreneurs are well established with their innovations to support healthcare industry.
